

Boots on the Ground: The Men and Women who made Mooney

With generous unparalleled access to the factory, the Mooney Ambassadors are pleased to present this lively documentary. The product is legendary, the achievements are great, now meet the people who made Mooney.

Boots is a documentary about the workers in the Mooney factory in Kerrville, Texas. Experience the journey of the workers who made Mooney airplanes. From the early days of Art and Al Mooney's wood designs to the world's fastest piston single in production the Acclaim Type-S, you will meet the men and women of Mooney.

This is a great American story about dedication to the product, ingenuity, passion and perseverance. We strongly believe it will have a wide aviation audience, not just for the 7000 Mooneys in our fleet.

The Mooney Ambassadors are a service club, with a three-part mission to: support Mooney, promote General Aviation and have someplace wonderful to fly. This has been an all-volunteer project and we thank you for your support.

“When you go into the Mooney factory you get the feeling you are in a manufacturing plant. There are rivet guns going off and the sound of the drop press. I always thought that if you dropped a pile of aluminum in the middle of the Mooney factory and came back in three weeks, you would find an airplane.”

Thomas Haines, AOPA Senior Vice President, Media Editor in Chief.
